ENERGY

With less than 48 hours to go before the strike deadline, there has been little or no movement on the part of Entergy to resolve any economic issues. It is the considered opinion of seasoned negotiators for the Union that Entergy is forcing the Union into an untenable position with no alternative but to reject Entergy's inadequate proposal for a Successor Collective Bargaining Agreement, if and when any is even submitted for review. The Union remains at the table with the fervent hope that an agreement can be reached; but as time goes by, that result becomes increasingly less likely.
